Released at the same time as the M12, the Epos M15 is a floor-standing, rear-ported, two-way speaker finished in a choice of black, light cherry or dark cherry veneer. The speaker sits firmly on its threaded spike-feet and if desired the bottom quarter of the cabinet can be filled with dry sand for extra stability and resonance damping.

The speakers are bi-wirable, thanks to two pairs of metal five-way binding posts. The driver complement is a 25mm ferrite tweeter with an aluminium dome and a 150mm polypropylene woofer. To quote from a review which resulted in these speakers receiving the Online Loudspeaker of the Year Award.

What you hear through the M15 is honest and uncoloured music. They don't boom or have that overcooked warmth that some speakers use to compensate for a lack of bass. "They are seductive" They have an awful lot going for them. They are compact enough to fit into almost any room and have an attractive veneer that makes them more like furniture. They sound great, too. They're accurate and dynamic and natural and they throw a huge, detailed soundstage out of all proportion to their size. Nor do they require expensive partners to sound good.
